Nobody covers the world like Lonely Planet.' --New York Post, May 2004

Who We Are At Lonely Planet, we see our job as inspiring and enabling travellers to connect with the world for their own benefit and for the benefit of the world at large. What We Do * We offer travellers the world's richest travel advice, informed by the collective wisdom of over 350 Lonely Planet authors living in 37 countries and fluent in 70 languages. * We are relentless in finding the special, the unique and the different for travellers wherever they are. * When we update our guidebooks, we check every listing, in person, every time. * We always offer the trusted filter for those who are curious, open minded and independent. * We challenge our growing community of travellers; leading debate and discussion about travel and the world. * We tell it like it is without fear or favor in service of the travellers; not clouded by any other motive. What We Believe We believe that travel leads to a deeper cultural understanding and compassion and therefore a better world.

This book is a big disappointment. I thought it would be filled with maps and diagrams of the places discussed. Nope. Just a couple of very basic maps and I do mean basic. Much of the information appears to be out-of-date and there are many omissions in the Roatan section so I am guessing the same goes for the rest of the book. The parts that I did read were so boring and generic that I really couldn't get more than a few pages in each section. Yeah, it has some nice color photos in the front of the book. But I could have gotten that elsewhere. BIG disappointment.

Lonely planet is always OK. I was with two others and each of us had a different book. Mandatory to cross reference on any trip.

Love all LP guidebooks. Never leave the US without one.

Met expectations.

Good little book

I work and live in Central America. I am particularly involved with conservation and conservation education. I was extremely disturbed by the cover of this issue of Lonely Planet, which shows a photograph of a tethered Green Iguana. The Green Iguana is a protected species in Honduras as it is in many places due to its rapidly dwindling population in the wild due to poaching. The process by which Green Iguana are tethered for sale and consumption is hugely cruel and involves them cutting the tendons out of the iguana while it is still alive and using them to tie the back legs together. If they capture a female iguana with eggs, this is even more valuable and so a string is tied around the iguana's stomach to stop her from being able to lay her eggs while her back legs are tied. She may be left in this condition in a pile of other iguanas for several days before being sold or consumed. I've always been a fan of Lonely Planet in the past and I'm sure that they have a large number of environmentally minded readers. I also believe that once those readers realise the editorial irresponsibility they have demonstrated in this edition, they will choose to find another publication. I sincerely hope they do the correct thing and make a sizeable donation to Green Iguana conservation programmes in Honduras as well as withdraw this edition and change the cover to something that is not promoting illegal poaching or animal cruelty.

The image on the cover of this book represents an illegal activity in Honduras. If you look closely you will see that this iguana's legs have been tied together by its tendons. I am a iguana biologist and when I contacted the company regarding this issues my concerns were ignored. Please do your part and do not buy this book or any other from this company.

Here Lonely Planet is promoting an illegal activity in Honduras. Look closely and you will see that this green iguana on the cover is tied up by its tendons, and ready to be sold. Please do your part and do not buy this book!
