Rodrick Owen is an internationally respected braiding instructor who popularized kumihimo through his teaching and books. Textile artist and art educator Terry Newhouse Flynn focuses on woven, braided, and knitted textiles. She enjoys teaching students a variety of braiding skills.

Unique, comprehensive, beautifully-illustrated reference for planning kumihimo braids with cores in the Andean style. Detailed teaching of beautiful, professional finishes on sling braids, a seemingly small topic that can make or break the loveliness and utility of the finished product. Designs can be completed with 70g tama on marudai with core-braiding stand or on the included square card (mounted on the back cover of the book), and many dozens of designs can be completed without the marudai/core stand. But hey, why not be part of the core stand trend? Plans included for building a core stand which is a simple-yet-elegant solution to the physical challenge of supporting the core for a braid. The use of a core in a kumihimo braid greatly expands the design possibilities for a braider and gives a unique "hand" to the braid that can be desirable for certain applications and even unachievable without the use of a core. A highly inspirational yet practical, can-do reference with a not-overwhelming presentation of Andean folk braiding traditions. The book's designs are stunning, and clearly present how to create these braid designs. Not just a coffee table book but one to crack open and use!

An excellent guide book for the esoteric art of Andean sling strap braiding. If you like kumihimo, you'll love this book

This book was a gift for a friend who does a lot of kumihimo braiding. She said that it is wonderful.

At last, a long-awaited, well-researched work is out, and master braider Rodrick Owen does not disappoint. Together with art educator Terry Flynn, the two have put together a splendid work exemplifying and teaching Sling Braids, particularly those that carry some threads up a core, to swap them out for color changes along the length of a braid. There are plans for building a Core Frame stand that Rodrick has developed with the aid of Doug Newhouse, as well as a braiding card tucked in at the back cover for those who want to dive into these complex braids immediately. Highest marks of achievement among complex braiders of all kinds.

Andean Sling Braids Rodrick Owen and Terry Newhouse Flynn Schiffer Publishing, Ltd This truly a beautiful book. It is very well conceived and presented. The Table of Contents enumerates everything one needs to travel the pathway of Andean Sling Braids. It begins by listing all of the braiding equipment, continues on to the various yarns, instructs the braider on all of the machinations of preparing the warp, setting up the braiding and basic working methods. Braider is then introduced to an amazing array of colorful braids which range anywhere from four to twenty four strand braid designs. There are some choices of equipment one can utilize on which to arrange the threaded bobbins. I have constructed many braided forms with both the marudai and the foam disk cards. In this elegant book we are presented with the "core frame". The braiding technique on this frame involves braiding around a of passive thread that are concentrated in the center of each braid. The exchange between the passive and the active braiding threads create a myriad of intriguing designs. BraidersHand is an excellent source for the core braid frame. The marudai mirror has the various thread bobbins located in strategic positions. Alongside this structure there is an upright upside down L shape form from which additional bobbins are suspended. There are great photographs of the core frame and luscious braids throughout this book. Nothing is left to chance. As stated above, everything one needs to create these braids are presented in depth. I am certainly looking forward to exploring many of these captivating new core based designs. Razine Wenneker

Lots of detail here for anyone interested in the topic.
