Synopsis

He's forced to revisit the past he left behind, and she's coming along for the ride. As a nurse, Phoebe has spent her career helping people. She knows it's her calling and throws herself into tending to her patients heart and soul. In the city of Ka-liket, she is considered one of the best attendants amongst those in the human colony. When she loses the most important patient she's ever had, though, a fuse is ignited that sends her spiraling into a course of events she never could have imagined. Zuran is the Interplanetary Affairs Officer for the Albaterran kingdom of Dhalat. He is also a reformed criminal, but he walked away from that life in pursuit of something better. When he meets the curvaceous and intelligent Phoebe, it's in the midst of a crisis, and he realizes he has never met someone so genuinely good. He soon discovers walking the straight-and-narrow is not the only unexpected change in himself as he finds himself captivated by the compassionate, beautiful human. Albaterra has been playing host to a colony of Novai for many months, but they are suddenly stricken with a mysterious disease neither Aali-uud nor humans have seen before. Suddenly, Zuran and Phoebe are thrown into the race against time to cure the disease before it kills the Novai colonists or spreads to the other beings who call Albaterra home. After she is unable to save an Elder, Phoebe battles her inner demons to fight for the ailing Novai. Meanwhile, Zuran is forced to battle demons of another kind when his brother is imprisoned for the Elder's death. They unite in hopes of achieving their goals, and they discover sides to themselves they never knew existed. Phoebe realizes how far she is willing to go for someone she cares about, and the ever-independent Zuran finds out just how much he needs her after all. Can a bad boy alien and a selfless nurse save the world? Can they even save themselves? Zuran is the sixth book in the Albaterra Mates series. ## Customer Reviews

Skimmed through most of it. The hero was smug, smirky, and not so heroic to me. The heroine was really smart but made so many foolish decisions to follow a "mischievous" alien as Ms. Hunt described him. Supposedly a grown-up, who still teased his brother like a teenager and resisted responsibility. He was not mischievous. He was a the butt end of a donkey if you know what I mean. By following along with his foolish decisions, the heroine turned from a smart, brave nurse into a foolish female also acting like an impetuous teenager following her bad criminal boyfriend into danger. I think I read one of Ms. Hunt's stories in the past and was not impressed but I wanted to give her another try since the premise of this one seemed interesting. It was not. I think Ms. Hunt has a lot of talent as a writer if only she could make her characters more special. Not perfect. Just more romantic and heroic in an adult, grown-up way.

What a fantastic ending to this series. I couldn't help but fall head over heels for Zuran. He was such a snarky alpha male in the last books that you just wanted to smack him upside the head. However, here we find out who is truly is and that Phoebe will be the one to ground him. I have to admit I didn't think the stories could get any more suspense than already known in the previous books, but Hunt proved me wrong once again. Each has their own story to tell without having to overlap the other. The one thing I would have like to have seen is Terrik getting his just desserts and whether Faro recuperate from his injuries. Also, I felt rather bad for the Novai even though they were depicted as bad guys in the previous book. Just a very well written story for me. Kudo to Hunt!

It seems that those who are the most snide are hiding the most sensual, sensitive side deep inside. For Zuran, it took Phoebe to bring that side out into the open. I guess Zuran was so use to being the ultimate bad boy that he didn't want to have anyone think any differently, but the love of a good woman will do that to a good man, or Albaterran, any day of the week. This story also had a great balance of action-adventure and hotness that left me hot and bothered. I really enjoyed this part of the adventure of the Albaterrans, humans and Novians. 1-click this story today!

The story has the original race on Albaterra working with the human colonists to figure out a sickness of another species of colonists. It has a little bit of romance and an interesting solution to the illness.

Zuran was Interplanetary Affairs Officer, a role given to him by Elder Kharid. So his twin brother, Venan, was reprimanding him for leaving the compound to go for a run! He had a more important task to complete! Elder Kharid wanted the healers brought by Zuran from the colony to the palace for an important Council debriefing. He finally disclosed to his brother that an unidentified disease had broken out and was killing the Novai. The Council wanted it diagnosed and cured before it spread uncontrollably to the humans and Albaterrans. Phoebe was examining her patient, a carpenter, who had accidentally shot a nail through his palm. She was discussing this with the doctor who would need to take a look when the door slammed open and the Interplanetary Affairs Officer strode in. He gathered the medical staff and took them to the palace, but immediately a crazed Novai who had escaped caused chaos. The warriors chased after it. Elder Kharid entered the room and reassured the medical staff. But the Novai had circled around and attacked them. Kharid was fighting them off when the warriors arrived and Venan thrust his sword through the almost-unstoppable Novai. Unfortunately, it passed through the beast and into Kharid's chest! Despite Phoebe's desperate and immediate attempt to save Kharid's life, he does not survive. What will happen now? How will this affect the medical work ahead of them all? What will happen to Venan in the accidental killing of the Elder? This is another excellent book in this Albaterra Mates series. Zuran and Phoebe have a rough beginning to their possible attraction. So much happens in that short amount of time that has major repercussions. The reader will love the suspense and fast-moving action of this book! I definitely recommend it. You won't be disappointed!

Zuran is the Interplanetary Affairs Officer on Albaterra. One day he gets orders to collect the human healers in the colony to bring them to the head elder. There is a medical crisis and the elder wants to use the human healers as well as the Albaterran healers to find a cure for a mysterious sickness. Zuran gathers the human healers and takes them to the elder's palace. When they arrive, they hear there is a crazed Novai on the loose. Zuran and his brother leave the humans with the elder to hunt down the Novai. They finally find him attacking the elder and threatening the humans. Zuran's brother stabs the Novai with his sword but the sword continues on into the elder. The elder dies even with the human healers trying to save him and Zuran's brother is arrested. Phoebe is a human nurse and is brought to the palace with the rest. She is confused and frightened but she is also drawn to Zuran. When the elder is killed, she does her best to save him but he is too far gone. She is later told that she and the other healers will be investigating an illness that is spreading among the Novai which makes them super aggressive and angry first, then the skin around their eyes rots, their skin changes colors and grows scales and then most die. Will they be able to find the answers to the sickness before it spreads to the other races on Albaterra? Phoebe and Zuran become friends and then even more while they are searching for answers. Zuran is also concerned about his brother who may be executed for accidentally killing the elder. This is a good book with many twists and turns. I voluntarily received a copy of this story and this is my honest review.
