Grade 2-4 – Tableaus of amazing size and intricacy unfold – and then unfold more – with each leaf's turn in this adaptation of Kipling's classic tale. Reinhart begins with a broad jungle scene for baby Mowgli's rescue from Shere Khan. He sets the lad's rescue from the monkeys against a towering ruin; takes him to the treasure chambers where White Cobra lurks behind a flap; pairs his first encounter with humans to a startling, savage leaping tiger; shows him enlisting a herd of elephants to destroy the village; and finishes with his farewell to a reunion of downcast animal friends on craggy Council Rock. Along with smaller pop-ups, the text is tucked beneath flaps in one or two corners of each scene. That text has been dramatically shortened, but Reinhart preserves at least vestiges of the original's stately language. Along with being a natural centerpiece for displays, this book provides a memorable introduction to both the film and the full-length literary work. © John Peters, New York Public Library Copyright © Reed Business Information, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved.

Matthew Reinhart, a graduate of the Pratt Institute, is the highly acclaimed author of Animal Popposites, The Ark, Cinderella, and The Jungle Book for Little Simon. His pop-up career began while working with Robert Sabuda on books like The Wonderful Wizard of Oz and The Movable Mother Goose, before breaking into the world of pop-ups on his own. Matthew lives in New York City.

Reinhart's and Sabuda's Pop-up books are just amazing and this beautifully illustrated version of Kipling's Mowgli's stories is faithful to the writer's vision while bringing back memories of Sabu as Mowgli in Alexander Korda's retelling of this jungle tale! The pop-up spread showing young Mowgli facing the old white cobra brought memories of Korda's movie which I have recorded off of tv. The shiny sparkling gold Kali statue and the Hindu elephant god statue among the pop-up treasure is both haunting and fascinating! Like Korda's version, Reinhart's book describes Mowgli's experiences in the man village and his reuniting with his human mother as well as his coming and going from the jungle to the man village and back. While Walt Disney concentrated on the fun animal personalities his animators came up with! Because of the vivid colours and playful inventiveness of the pop-ups the book has an animated feel that makes me think of the cartoon yet it has the dramatic conflict and struggle Sabu expresses in dealing with hunter Buldeo, who accused Mowgli of being a demon and he wants to be rid of Mowgli! The big pop-up spread of Shere Khan leaping forward and the smaller pop-ups of Mowgli waving a branch of fire at the big cat and riding a buffalo to stampede the tiger are so dramatic and powerful! In contrast there is a sweet depiction of Mowgli's human mother, Mussua holding a plate of food for her jungle son. And I love the 4 pop-up 3D elephants with Mowgli on one of their backs! They have rounded pop-up bodies! How does Reinhart do it!!? I would say this book goes well with both Disney's and Korda's film versions of these Kipling characters and Matthew Reinhart has managed to create a pop-up version that has it's own special magic! I'm glad to have it!

While the pop-up art is magnificent, the retelling of the story is sadly lacking. I think anyone familiar with the Kipling version of "The Jungle Book" would have to be disappointed in this choppy, rewritten story.

This is one amazing book. Have started buying used pop-ups for my 2-year old grandson who is mesmerized by pop-ups. I collect pop-ups as well and I did not have this particular one. Going to buy my own version soon. I bought him a used but in great shape copy just in case he gets a bit too rough with the book but with other pop-ups he's been good. Highly recommend this Reinhart classic

I ordered this for my 6 yr old because we already have another book by the same author, the one with nursery rhymes and it's amazing. This one, however, although will "wow" kids of any age, is so intricate that it's really not for youngsters. Plus, the story itself is also not really written for young kids, either. People of any age can appreciate the amazing art. But my child didn't last long with me trying to read to her.

The five stars are for the pop ups. The pictures are beautiful. The illustrations are detailed and we'll done. The story itself is okay. I bought this book for the brilliant pop ups. The story is written in corners of the books in a small font. Definitely not meant for young readers. Probably for older children. But the pop ups can captivate readers of any age.

These are really beautiful intricate pop up books, my 7 year old loves them! Not suitable for younger children as they are delicate to tearing.

My granddaughter has turned out to be an avid reader. At 7, she already has one of Reinhart/Sabuda's books which she and her brother treasure. One of my favorite authors is Rudyard Kipling, and when I was a child, Sabu played Mowgli in the old movie version of "The Jungle Book". I still love that movie. When I saw that Reinhart had it in pop-up (another favorite thing of mine), I could not wait to give it to her for her birthday. The book is bright, so intriguing with its explosive pop-ups, and secret corner pop-ups that you miss, sometimes, because the centerpiece is so amazing, I knew that I had to give it to her. I made the right choice. She loved it. When Sher-Khan jumped out of the page at her, her eyes got wide and she took her fist and carefully put it in his mouth. And then she laughed. Her brother, who is nearly 5, was impressed too. Since he loves sharks (both of them do), he gets that one for his May birthday. I can't tell you enough about the quality of these books. They are for children of all ages (why can't grownups have pop-ups?) and collector's items. I want to give them the whole series, including the Sabuda collaborations. You absolutely cannot go wrong. The story was adapted for this book, and until my granddaughter is ready to read Kipling "like a big girl", she has lost nothing. I hope you will consider this for your young ones. I am a writer and a published author (see my books on) and now I think I'd like to try making pop-ups of my own. What a project!! can't drawer!
