Road Through The Rain Forest: Living Anthropology In Highland Papua New Guinea

Synopsis

On the remote slopes of the grassland and rain forests of Highland Papua New Guinea, live the Awa, subsisting on root crops and raising domestic pigs. Like many cultures, the Awa must deal with and find solutions to the problems of human social existence: inevitable and rapid culture change, interpersonal squabbles, lying and deceit, adultery, sorcery, and unexpected death. They wait ambivalently for the building of a road that would put them in direct contact with the encroaching world of trade stores, outdoor markets, schools, and the government station. In the middle of this walks an anthropologist who learns that fieldwork is first and foremost about understanding lives, both his and theirs. This book is a personal narrative that provides an intimate glimpse of the actual conduct of fieldwork among diverse individuals with remarkably distinct views of their own culture. It is an account of intertwined livesâof living anthropologyâand a road of hope and promise, despair and tragedy.

I really enjoyed this ethnographic study/book, required for the Anthropology (People of the Pacific) course. Mr. Hyano explains his experiences with great imagery, so much that I felt I was there with him. Excellent read, thank you for your hard-work, and for sharing your experiences with the general population, whom may not travel to such distances....

It was like reading a dictionary.. The first page was as exciting as the last.. I had to read this book in college.

I think it was informative, but it also left a lot up to the interpretation of the reader. It didn't tell you that the Awa was this, this and this, it showed you through actions.

Not my favorite book. Part of class work
