If you have the right expectations, this book can be a great deal of fun! The idea is that you color in areas according to a color key and reveal an architectural landscape. In addition there is a page of thumbnail coloring guides to the design. This is a very large format coloring book - almost 11 by 15 inches, with the design on single-sided, perforated pages. There are 20 different designs, in a range of complexities, though most are fairly complex. Things to consider if you are thinking of getting this book:--the individual areas to color can be quite small, the size of a match head in some. With the large page size, it will require some sustained effort to finish an image. So if you like quick-to-complete designs, you may find it frustrating. If you like a prolonged coloring project though, this will likely satisfy.--between the small areas to color and the fact that the outlines and color number are printed in a very light gray (so as not to interfere with your finished colored page), you will want to have very good light to work on the designs. You may also want a piece of cardboard underneath to help stabilize the book as you work, if you don't have a desk/table to work on. With the very light gray lines, this is not a coloring book for someone with poor eyesight, problems with eyestrain, or low lighting situations.-- if you really want to get fairly close to the colors in the color keys, you'll need many more than just primary colors, or patience with mixing, Some of the designs are very geometric and pattern-like - almost like a quilt, and others more realistic but still stylized, like a graphic travel poster A nice selection of buildings from around the world.

LOVE LOVE LOVE all of the color quests! Please come out with more soon! These are all challenging without being impossible. The only negative is the fact that most pages require multiple shades of brown or multiple shades of gray, which I don't have. So the finished product isn't always accurate. But I don't really care, I just enjoy the process. I highly recommend!

Excellent detail, beautiful pictures. Every color quest book I've bought so far has been incredible, looking forward to seeing more in the series!

What a challenge!! I am thoroughly enjoying it. I have been working on the first image for a couple of days, which is the Seattle Space Needle. So many spaces to color and 14 different colors (15 if you include "white"). Each page in the book is a different cityscape. One city per page, but thin enough for bleed through so be aware. I am using Bic Markers ultra fine and bleed through is constant. They will be great to hang when completely!!! found my self calm and thinking as I color this. Great books for a meditation I find. What a sense of accomplishment when completed, too. I am half way there!

This is the most detailed "color" book I have seen . The author has given the artist full page cityscapes from all over the world to color in. The backgrounds are white with the shapes of buildings or scenery. Some of the pages have squares, circles or hexagons to color in to make the picture. Each page has a color pallet, so areas with a #1 are a certain color. Some of the cityscapes are from Japan, Iceland, Italy, India, and France. The author takes the artist around the world. Some of the specific scenes are The Louvre, The Colosseum, Copenhagen seafront, and the Brandenburg Gate. To me this will take a lot of patience and careful concentrating to color each spot carefully with the specific color. The author indicates to the artist who to use color pencils or pens effectively. With patience you will create a gorgeous picture.
